accounts, and promises to increase in power and reputation of genius.

The Republic requires to fall into the hands of some able charioteer. At present, money is so much the deity of every man's worship, and those who acquire it lavish it so profusely in the grati-fication of every passion, that one can form no guess when any great and good man is to make his appearance. But if the present powers can but keep the country quiet, the vast bulk alone of the Empire will settle itself into consistency and order by its own weight. Thirty-six millions of men will not long continue in an uncomfortable situation where the force is in their own hands; and, by degrees, that regularity and order ne-cessary for the existence even of a gang of robbers must overpower anarchy and vice, or perish.

You will laugh, perhaps, at all this political tirade;—but I am quietly seated by my fireside, waiting for a person to go and see Mr. Boyd's house and furniture, from which I have got the seals removed; and I' put down my ideas as they arise, by way of conversation with you.

You must expect, in the course of correspondence, many variations in my opinion, because every day presents objects in a different light,
